Course Outline: This course will cover the historical and current state of the Chinese economy. The focus will be on the transformation of China's economy into a market economy with its special characteristics. China was the largest and one of most advanced economies in the world before the eighteenth century, yet declined precipitately thereafter and degenerated into one of the world's poorest economies by the late nineteenth century. Since the Chinese government introduced economic reform in 1978 from a planned economy toward a market-oriented economy, China has experienced rapid institutional changes and rapid growth. It becomes the second largest economy in the world. In this course, we will combine both historical-institutional and theoretical approaches to study China's economy. We will start with the historical background. We will then study the policy institution reforms and resulting economic growth and potential challenges. This course will provide answers to why China was so advanced in pre-modern times, what caused it to become so poor for almost two centuries, how it grew into a market economy, where its potential is for continuing dynamic growth and what further reforms are needed to complete the transition to a well-functioning, advanced market economy.

Grade Determination and Final Examination Details:

There will be one midterm exam (worth 30%), three assignments (worth 15%), one class presentation (worth 10%), and final exam (worth 45%). Students who are unable to write the midterm because of an illness, family emergency or religious observance will have the midterm weight shifted to the final examination. Documentation MUST be provided.”

All work will be marked on a numerical basis, then aggregated, and converted to letter grades. The following grade conversion chart is an approximate guide to letter grade equivalents.
