Course Description:
This is the capstone course for the Applied Energy Economics program. Students will study and learn how to apply methods of data analysis that are particularly useful in the context of energy economics. The course will discuss current econometric techniques commonly used in energy economics research, and critically review some of the top research papers in energy economics. Students will develop and present a serious energy research project.

Course Learning Outcomes:

a) be familiar with sources of energy data and have the ability and knowledge to collect, collate, and analyze energy data for the purpose of empirically investigating energy markets and evaluating public policy alternatives.

b) be able to work with large data sets, preparing data for computer imputation and reading data into standard computer econometric programs.

c) understand the statistical theory used to support and build econometric models.

d) be knowledgeable with standard econometric skills in setting up and evaluating econometric equations.

e) be familiar with econometric procedures for estimating econometric equations using least squares and maximum likelihood estimators.

f) be familiar with identification issues in econometric modelling.

g) be familiar with the construction and use of Instrumental Variables in econometric application.

h) be knowledgeable with price forecasting techniques.

i) be knowledgeable with techniques for building and interpreting elasticities.

j) be proficient with econometric procedures for estimating single and multi-equation econometric models.

k) have the ability to critically read the applied energy literature.
l) be able to produce a serious research paper on an applied energy topic that combines knowledge of energy markets, statistical theory, econometric application and policy evaluation.

m) be able to present and defend the findings of the research in a business setting.

Course Outline:

a) Energy data and statistics.

b) Collecting, preparing and presenting energy data for evaluation.

c) Econometric software used in applications.

d) Estimating energy demand models.

e) Estimating energy supply models.

f) Measuring scale economies and productivity in energy markets.

g) Interpreting and applying energy elasticities.

h) Measuring price relationships and defining relevant markets.

i) Empirical skills for testing linkages across markets.

j) Report empirical results and research presentation skills.

This course will make use of the Desire2Learn (D2L) platform. Students who are registered in the course can log on at http://d2l.ucalgary.ca through their student centre. Please note that D2L features a class email list that may be used to distribute course-related information. These e-mails go to your University

The Written Term Paper must be uploaded by the student to the D2L Dropbox by 11:59PM on Tuesday April 19th (one week after the last day of instruction for the Winter 2022 term).

There will be no final examination for this course. As the capstone course for the Concentration in Applied Energy Economics, this course emphasizes research writing skills and presentation skills. For this reason, the Written Term Paper and Presentation constitute, in aggregate, 55% of the overall grade.

The final version of the Written Term Paper must be uploaded by the student to the D2L Dropbox by 11:59PM on Tuesday April 19th (one week after the last day of instruction for the Winter 2022 term).

The Presentation of the Written Term Paper will take place during scheduled class time. All students shall be present for all student presentations.

The official grading system will be used. See http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/f-1-1.html.

Students must receive a passing grade on the Written Term Project and the Term Project Presentation to pass the course.

If a student’s letter grade on the final written project exceeds their assignment(s) letter grade, the weight of the assignments) is (are) transferred to the written term project at the discretion of the instructor. The student must have written the assignment(s) or provided supporting documentation for the absence(s) such as a medical note or statutory declaration.

As per the Writing Across the Curriculum Statement in the Calendar, writing and grading thereof will be a factor in the evaluation of student work. See https://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/e-2.html.

Course material dealing with a particular assignment will typically be covered in class at least 2 days before the assignment is due; thus, assignments can be completed at any time up to and including the due date. Given these factors, only situations where someone can document illness or domestic affliction for an extended period (i.e., the entire 2 days prior to the due date) would possibly warrant shifting the assignment weight to the final exam. Furthermore, technical problems can be expected to occur with computer systems (and internet availability) so it may be a good idea to not wait until the last minute to submit your assignment.

Any student work which remains undistributed after the last day of classes will be available to students through the instructor’s office during the instructor’s office hours for a period of one month.
