Course Description:
Economics and psychology posit different models of decision making, each emphasizing different aspects of how individuals are motivated and process information. Behavioral economics lies at the intersection of economics and psychology, investigating behavior, interactions, and markets when individuals display psychological phenomena not typically accounted for in the standard economic model of a rational decision maker. This course will be concerned with aspects of behaviour that are particularly relevant to the analytical constructs utilized in conventional economics.

Course Learning Outcomes:
1. Develop analytic and critical thinking skills regarding the use and interpretation of economic models, methods, and analyses.

2. Introduced to methods and models in psychology, with an emphasis on areas in which economic models do not predict behaviour well, and psychological phenomena that are particularly relevant to economics.

3. Introduced to the economic brand of psychological research on social preferences. Of particular importance here are models and theories of other-regarding behaviour, theories of reciprocity, and the formation of beliefs and intentions in decision making.

4. Review of theories of decision making under uncertainty from intermediate microeconomics and the introduction of new models of ambiguity and loss aversion. This includes both axiomatic approaches to decision making under uncertainty and prescriptive models (e.g., prospect theory).

5. Introduced to the theory of mental accounting and other positive theories of consumer choice. Emphasis on the application of these theories within organizations and policy contexts.

6. Review of theory of discounted utility from intermediate microeconomics and the introduction of non-exponential discounting models (e.g., hyperbolic and quasi-hyperbolic discounting). Models are applied to issues in savings, investment behaviour, and self-control.

7. Introduced to the concepts of social and personal identity from psychology and how they are applied in economics. Includes review of seminal experiments in the field of psychology and economic models that incorporate these ideas.
8. Introduced to hedonic psychology and the role of emotions in decision making. Also introduced to the concept of subjective well-being, as used in economic analyses and as a measure of economic development.

9. Develop the skills necessary to conduct research, including developing a research question, choosing an appropriate methodology, reviewing relevant literature, and communicating results. Included in this outcome are professional skills developed by giving written feedback on others’ work through a peer review exercise.

Course Outline:
We will study several topics, including (1) the general subject area of behavioral economics; (2) research methods in behavioral economics, including controlled experiments; (3) the model of the “rational economic agent”: meanings of rationality, empirical evidence on non-rational behavior and various views of the relevance of these empirical results; (4) the nature of bounded rationality, bounded self-interest, and bounded self-control/willpower in economic decision-making; (5) the role of preference (taste) changes in economics: various views of economic motivation, the role of preference differences in explaining economic behaviour; (6) various non-market influences of the economic system on individual well-being.

The official grading system will be used. See http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/f-1-1.html.
A passing grade on at least 50% of the course work (according to the weights above) is required to pass the course.

As per the Writing Across the Curriculum Statement in the Calendar, writing and grading thereof will be a factor in the evaluation of student work. See https://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/e-2.html.

Course material dealing with a particular assignment will typically be covered in class at least 7 days before the assignment is due; thus, assignments can be completed at any time up to and including the due date. Given these factors, only situations where someone can document illness or domestic affliction for an extended period (i.e., the entire 7 days prior to the due date) would possibly warrant shifting the assignment weight to the final exam. Furthermore, technical problems can be expected to occur with computer systems (and internet availability) so it may be a good idea to not wait until the last minute to submit your assignment.

Any student work which remains undistributed after the last day of classes will be available to students through the instructor's office during the instructor’s office hours.

The final examination will be comprehensive, scheduled by the Registrar, held in a classroom, and last 2 hours. If a student cannot write their final exam on the date assigned by the Registrar’s Office, they need to apply for a deferred exam https://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/g-6.html. Under no circumstance will this be accommodated by the Department.

Tests and exams will not involve multiple choice questions.

Programmable calculators, cellphones, textbooks, course notes, and other electronic devices will not be allowed during the writing of tests or final examinations. Students are reminded that simply being able to access their cellphone during an exam is academic misconduct.

THERE WILL BE NO MAKEUP OR DEFERRED QUIZZES/TESTS/EXAMS under any circumstances, nor may the quizzes/tests/exams be written early. Students unable to write the quizzes/tests/exams because of documented illness, family emergency, religious observance, or university-sanctioned event will have the weight shifted to the final examination; otherwise a grade of zero will be assigned.

Student committing academic misconduct during the final exam will not receive a passing grade for the course.
